

Weiss Röhlig launches first direct ocean consolidation service between Taiwan and Boston

Taiwan, 25 February, 2013

Weiss Röhlig, a leading global provider of logistics services, has launched weekly consolidation container service for loose cargo from Taiwan to Boston in the United States.

The main benefit for shippers is that currently all loose cargo destined for Boston, is routed via New York and trucked to Boston, adding time and cost.

“This new service will also be beneficial to consignees in Massachusetts and New Hampshire and it will shorten the overall transit time. In these tough economic times it is important that we continue looking for ways to cut costs and save time for our customers,” said Holger Stoelker, Managing Director, Weiss Röhlig, Taiwan.

The transit time is 37 days and cargo will be accepted in Taoyan and Kaohsiung.
